

Report on- Professional Ethics in Engineering Practice

On the 24th September, 2025, a session was conducted for the EXTC department SE students on Designing with integrity: Navigating ethical dilemmas in engineering.

The objectives of the session were-

1. To discuss the need for ethics in engineering.
2. To outline the challenges faced while handling decisions.
3. To demonstrate the need for decision making model.

The session focused on how the ethical norms protect the engineers in their profession as well as protects the rights of the society and in turn develops a trust between the engineers and the clients they are working for.

The challenges they would and even now face as students are the situational ones which they are in control of and the not so situational ones which are not in their control and what would be their ways of handling them were spoken about.

Lastly the 7-stage decision making model was discussed with the help of a case. How they can make a dilemma statement and then brainstorm the various alternatives they have in hand and the principles and values that they stand for.

Ended the session with the code of ethics laid down by the NSPE for engineers and Aristotle's words of "We are what we repeatedly do. Excellence therefore is not an act but a habit." Hence, we need to practice ethics from today onwards.
